SAFE BLOW AT TABLE ROCK

Four Burglers Enter Mill at Lather Plank at Table Rock and Dynamite Safe. Large Amount of Money and Valuables Stolen.

The mill of Lather Plank at Table Rock, Pa., broke into between one and a half tons, carrying the safe dynamite, between fifty and sixty dollars in cash, and other valuables taken. Four burglars did the work and escaped without being caught though stolen were fired from them. The robbers left in great haste, carrying the money, but were unsuccessful. From the theft they went to the table rock where they were arrested in a firing.

The explosion was heard by no one in Table Rock. The first indication that there was anything wrong was received by William Fox, the Table Rock millman, who was sleeping in the room above the office. He awoke and found the door open and hearing some one in the room below, he went down to see what was the matter. The night was pitch dark and the forms of the men could not be seen.

Investigation showed that the safe had been broken into between one and a half tons, carrying the safe dynamite, between fifty and sixty dollars in cash, and other valuables taken. Four burglars did the work and escaped without being caught though stolen were fired from them.

KEEPING UP HIGHWAYS

MOVE ALL WATER QUICKLY.

The United States office of public works in Washington sent out the following bulletin regarding the proper use of road drainage:

With an average of 21,000 tons of rain falling in the form of rain on a mile square of land in the United States annually, it is scarcely to be wondered at that the ten commandments of the road builder can be summed up succinctly in the word "drainage." The saying has truth for a reason, so good drainage is the primary consideration in road building. Even in the little truce, for there "good mags" means such as will safely carry the storm water without erosion or putrefying and will retain the face in shape.

Obtain good drainage now must water and the underground water. The slope should be constructed quickly and completely and then subjected the road to erosion, frost or erosion. For this reason the slope should be constructed in the slope toward the side ditches. The slope toward the side ditches should be from one-half to one inch per foot distance, or so that the water will flow down the road and not flow down the road or into the puddles on the roadway. The side ditches should be of simple shape, for instance, a triangle, a full width of less than six inches, and a depth of less than six inches. The side ditches should be constructed every opportunity should be taken to get the water out of the road as far as possible. Any road along which the water standing in the side ditches on the road surface is not collected or which has been badly gullied and eroded by the rains has poor drainage and is in need of immediate action. In fact, with roads having drainage require a little attention after a rain.

The split log drainage is essentially a

ROAD THAT DRAINAGE WOULD IMPROVE.
The roads and should be used after rain. On a heavy clay or gumbo the drag when properly used tends to puddle the road surface, keep it from drying, cause it to become soft and rut, rut, decay, smooth and hard, is securing the best surface drainage possible.

and in many places the underground water is too near the surface and it is removed before a good road can be formed. This means that the form of subdrainage must be altered to, usually clay drains or clay concrete. Water from whatever source must be got rid of effectively. If water in freezing climates oozes out its volume, the road heaves up and disappears beneath the rising tide and soon and underground springs.

It is a good idea to place a drainage subgrade in order to be fully effective should lower the water level to not less than three feet below the road surface. The drainage should be installed carefully laid, true to grade. Most levels in the drainage can be estimated to correctness in laying or, for the sake of safety, the drainage near the diaphragm should rarely be over, nor should a grade of less than 1/4 inch to the hundred feet be used.

For the fine sand and gravel to be used for the fill it is always advisable to excavate the soil to at least a depth of 12 to twelve inches with a coarse sand and fine gravel. This will insure the soil to procure a free outlet for the water and to protect the outlet with concrete bulkhead or catch basin, which can always be kept clean and a free outlet.

The kind of the soil to be used depends on the level conditions. Concerns the type of soil to use is the responsibility of the engineer. Which kind to use is entirely a sistent. If not, use clay tile.

Convict Labor in Building of Roads.
 At a recent meeting of the national roads board, held in New York City, Senator C. T. Lanier of Virginia outlined the method of building roads with convicts in the Old Dominion.
 Governor Goddard, chairman of the board, has decided to make a census of the entire United States to find out which states employ convicts in the building of roads. This will be followed up later with an effort to get the states to use convict labor in road building. There is a great movement to abolish convict labor in any of the industry where it interferes with organized labor, but in no part of the country does organized labor object to the use of convicts in the building of road.

Love in a Dictionary

after my being graduated as senior I was placed in charge of a railroad running large tract composing the of Don Jose Miranda. On the
 of my arrival on the ground an invitation from him to

I might have declined to help under obligation, left it to him as likely to return as not as evercrispulous. Don Jose had a pretty danger. Yashel, who was heir to a large portion of his estate. I felt nothing but my profession forbade me to take advantage of him. I have listened a moment to his ambition to make love to this woman a younger wishes to be his thing in such a case he is forced to give up his heart. I have seen his heart to the girl in that way. I beat the devil's whip not only as a naive conscience, but because I was the people he had received his education. Whether Dona had ever met with them I did not know. While turning over the dictionary I stopped and thought for awhile on the subject. Then, carefully turning the leaves, I ascertained it so remain the word "word." In this way I read the line:

Should I climb, but fear to fall.
I overheard the word "climb" and thought for "lost" when Dona talked away from me. I interpreted the word "climb" as the word "lost" and the word
"word" as the word "lost."

Replacing the dictionary in my father about the location of through his friends, a which he was interested.

... were downstairs and was to my work when passing the library. I was surprised the dictionary lying open on a table to it, my eye rested on the word "if", which included beginning with the letter "I."
The word "if" I noticed a light mark.
I jumped. "If" was the be-

Queen Elizabeth's reply to the courtier. Rapidly turning leaves to words beginning "I looked for 'you.' There pencil mark under it. "Are" meant word in the queen's reply, too. I found underscored. I all I required to convince me not only had a reply to my message but the reply I desired. It was under it. I told her that city with two days. I wished about what think of embarrassment couldn't I H H

I'm afraid, climb not at all,
 the famous rhyme:
 I climb, but fear to fall.
 I'm afraid, climb not at all.
 So well known to Dona Yaabel did not need to see it come the word "climb."
 surface, from this time till I abated my work, Dona Yaabel and her companions. We even use the dictionary or any means of communication, but just before I was to take my departure making a pretense of a word, I withdrew the volume from the library and began a human story over me, and I pointed out the following words:

My is dark. The road I fall to see.
My is I had corrected my mistake.
